NB: All of our schools are full-time residential training courses. It is not possible for students to pursue other courses of study or part-time employment while taking a U of N course.

Team leaders, please complete this application on behalf of your team. If there are any side notes that you deem important, please contact South Roots International directly. Although the PRCS is a University of the Nations Secondary School, we do not require that the student completes a DTS before the school. It is however strongly suggested that students applying should have had some form of basic discipleship training of sorts, be it with some other organization or their local church. In order to be accredited with the University of the Nations – College of Arts and Sports or Humanities, the student must have completed a YWAM DTS.

METHOD OF PAYMENT

Due to the volatility of our Rand against most other major currencies, we work only in our local currency. We are however in a position to take any foreign currency and bank this and credit you with its value on the day we do the transaction. The Rand equivalent of the US Dollar is currently between R10 and R15 to the Dollar.

SCHOLARSHIPS

Our prices are among the lowest, separate applications must be made for further scholarship. Since South Roots International is interdenominational, multilingual, and multiracial organization, the fee schedule takes all of the above factors into consideration in order to make university level education accessible to applicants meeting the requirements for admission. We view the higher fees paid by students from more advantaged communities as their contribution to the process of empowering others who are less fortunate. Such generosity is always a welcome return to our founding values. Further more, we deeply appreciate the participation of students who feel the way we do about helping the needy.

NB: Should a student not complete a school the international refund policy on page 29 of the University of the Nations catalogue, 2002-2004 will be applied to the student's refund claim.
